3 Ways Workplace Supports IT Collaboration Objectives

Reducing Time to Find Information

Workplace Groups can be used for anything from archiving content to crowdsourcing the answers to frequently asked questions - turning Workplace into a persistent knowledge base for every organization.

Integrating Tools and Workflows

People will always use multiple tools to get work done. But that can cause compatibility issues, or simply waste time and energy switching between apps. That's why Workplace integrates with over 50 best of breed enterprise apps like Jira, Google Drive and Quip so documents can be shared seamlessly in a single place.

Improving Knowledge Management

Building an effective intranet remains an elusive Holy Grail for many businesses. Workplace brings the power of discoverability to the traditional intranet through an integration with Microsoft SharePoint. You can also attach folders from your favorite cloud storage tools like Box, Dropbox and Microsoft OneDrive.

Tools and Technology to Connect Everyone

Connected Technologies

Workplace connects with over 50 popular enterprise apps for everything from collaboration (Jira, Google Drive) to document management (Box, Dropbox), and automated workflows (ADP, ServiceNow). So you can use more of the tools you love in the place you do your work.

Foster Employee Communities

Whether they're for company announcements, project updates or social sharing, Groups are the heartbeat of Workplace. Choose your privacy settings, share unlimited files, and even invite people from outside your company into a secure, shared space.

Stay Secure and In Control

Your security is our top priority. It's why all Workplace data is kept separate from Facebook's, and why we exceed industry standards with ISO 27001 and 27018 certifications.

I could hire thousands of people to help our associates have a better experience, but instead we're finding that associates answer each other's questions in Groups dedicated to Workplace or other products. It's beyond communication; it's actually helping us solve problems.
